as its medical chief from the very day it first opened its doors to the sick and maimed. The same care and attention that he was wont to give those under his care were shown him. Dr. McElroy was constantly by his side and the skill and experience of the entire medical hospital staff was at his command in any emergency.

During last night the patient showed some signs of rallying and the doctor feit very much encouraged, but he later developed symptoms of dissolution and the physician realized that all was over or soon would be with the veteran doctor. His friend and admirer of many years, John J. Daly, was at his bedside until the end and he was visited many times during yesterommand in any emergency. was visited many times during yester-day and last evening by physicians and

Dr. Fowler was a power in local medical circles and stood high in the esteem of his fellow physicians. As the medical director of the Holy Cross hospital he has acquired a reputation that extends all over the intermountain country. He as born in the state of Virginia, and coupled with his skill and aptitude in medicine, were those fine instincts of the true Virginia gentieman which made him as much a favorite in the drawing as in the sick room.

He received his education in a Virginia institution and at the outbreak of the war of the rebellion he enlisted on the Confederate side and fought valiantly for "The lost cause." At the close of the war he returned to college and completed his education after which he came west to grow up with the country and find an ample field for his activities. He arrived in Salt Lake in the later '60s and this city has been his home ever since. He stood as one of the pioneer doctors of this city and in all his long career extending over thirty years here, his record has been true and his profession stands higher for his having been in it.

The only relative he leaves in this city is J. D. Wood, the well known mining operator and live-stock man. His grandmother was an aunt of Dr. Fowler's. A brother and other relatives in Virginia have been notified of his demise and no arrangements for the funeral will be made until they are Capt. Paul, the new chief, is no tyre at the business to which he is not called. He was appointed first b Mayor Baskin in 1890 to fill the place made vacant by the removal of Janney and later under Mayor Glendinning h served again as chief of police for sever months while Chief Pratt was under suspension, and until the Supreme ourt restored the latter. When asked this morning what his policy would be with reference to Sun-day closing of saloons Chief Paul said: That is a matter I do not care to speak about at this time. I am going to have a talk with the mayor first; also with the police committee. There are some things I want to understand before I qualify. I will take hold of the department this afternoon in time to take the 3 o'clock shift out. Before the men go on to their beats I shall tell them filed and the resignation accepted.
